DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114 was filed in this application after a decision by the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences, but before the filing of a Notice of Appeal to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit or the commencement of a civil action. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114 and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the appeal has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114 and prosecution in this application has been reopened pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on April 15, 2005 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 7-11, 13, 14, 18, and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Serpico et al. in view of Dupont Zonyl reference.

The rejection is maintained for the reasons already of record. The examiner notes the present amendment to claim 1 which a catalytic material including "platinum and another material". Serpico et al. teaches platinum and another material in the form of platinum and carbon, e.g. platinum-supported carbon. (Example I) The present amendment further recites that the platinum catalytic material is "randomly spaced and uniformly mixed". Serpico et al. in Example I further teaches that "[t]he mixture was stirred with moderate agitation to form a viscous particle dispersion”, and upon addition of the fluoropolymer (PTFE), “[t]he dual particle suspension was stirred slowly until homogenous.”

Art. Unit: 1745

Claim 12 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Serpico et al. in view of Dupont Zonyl reference as applied to claims 7-11, 13, 14, 18, and 20 above, and further in view of Kindler.

The rejection is maintained for the reasons of record. The present amendment is believed prima facie obvious over the combined teachings of Serpico et al. and the Dupont Zonyl reference, set forth above. The rejection further in view of Kindler is maintained for the detailed reasons already of record.

Claims 15-17, 19, 21 and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Serpico et al. in view of Dupont Zonyl reference as applied to claims 7-11, 13, 14, 18, and 20 above, and further in view of Samuels et al.

The rejection is maintained for the reasons of record. The present amendment is believed prima facie obvious over the combined teachings of Serpico et al. and the Dupont Zonyl reference, set forth above. The rejection further in view of Samuels et al. is maintained for the detailed reasons already of record.

Applicant's arguments for patentability for the instant roughening step have been fully considered, however they are not found persuasive.

Art Unit: 1745

The teachings of Samuels et al. are maintained to show that roughening of the membrane surface prior to catalyst deposition would be an obvious modification at least to the skilled artisan. This feature is considered shown by Samuels et al. in col. 7 line 33 as follows:

...before the catalyst is deposited upon the surface of the solid polymer electrolyte, the surface is treated by a suitable abrading or roughening means which contacts the surface of the solid polymer electrolyte base member in at least two directions. In a preferred mode, the solid polymer electrolyte membrane is abraded with a silicon carbide sheet to provide the desired roughness. The catalyst is deposited upon the roughened or abraded surface and fixed thereto by suitable means, e.g., pressure and/or heat. By this method, substantially reduced loadings of catalysts are possible.

Thus, it is maintained that the skilled artisan would find obvious to employ roughening of the membrane in Serpico et al.'s invention for reasons such as increasing the surface area thereof, thereby enhancing sites for catalyst deposition.
